LOST AND FOUND.

I lost a maiden long ago;
Last night I thought I'd found her,
And as my loyal heart's one queen
I quietly recovered her.

'Twould not be truth to say she seemed
Untouched by time, since silver
Fen than of old I found her face,
The roses in it faded.

Her hair had more golden grown,
While locks once hazy and thin
Upon my own poor pete, alas,
For many a year have been thin.

The eyes—whose shafts the little god
Employed to overcome me—
Shone brighter, smiles were on the lips
Whose "No" did once benumb me.

My heart beat high with hope, but when
I spoke her name another
Who stood beside the maid replied,
The maiden called her "Mother."

The maiden smiled on me, I dared
Not tell her that I'd sought her
Through long and weary years, at last
To find her—in her daughter!

—Boston Globe.

FRIGHTENED HIS WIFE.

Forty Cents Almost the Cause of a Catastrophe.

Before Mrs. Browley was married she scoffed at the misguided girls and women who kept personal accounts. Her argument was that if you know how much money you had and it was all gone what was the use of piling on the anguish by having your folly and extravagance in black and white to stare you in the face, especially as you had no more money at the end of the month than you had without an account book?

But since she has been running a house she has achieved not one but nearly a dozen account books. There is one devoted to the grocery man, another to the butcher, personal accounts take a third, and so on till she spends nearly all her glad young life balancing sums. It is a matter of pride with her that they shall come out even, and so there was woe last month when 40 cents refused to be accounted for. She and Mr. Browley had a grave and lengthy discussion over the missing 40. Each accused the other of frivolling the sum away and neglecting to enter it on the proper book, "Sundries." Mr. Browley insisted strenuously he was not guilty. Mrs. Browley looked pained and urged him to confess. He left for down town vowing vengeance. It was late that afternoon when Mrs. Browley was entertaining a roomful of aristocratic callers that a telegraph boy appeared. The maid brought in the fatal yellow envelope, and at once the bride knew her husband had been fatally injured and was needing for her. Some one revived her with smelling salts, a lady in purple velvet fanned her with a hastily snatched lamp shade, and a third visitor with more presence of mind than the rest opened the telegram. The message read:

"Honest, now, what did you do with that 40 cents?"—Chicago News.

The Breton Peasant.
If there is a country where the tradition of hatred of "the Englishman" as a hereditary enemy still holds it is in Catholic Brittany. In the eyes of the Breton peasants and fishermen the Englishman is the enemy with whom they have fought battles and will fight them again.

That is to say, the Englishman stands for the typical sailor of a man-of-war or torpedo boat, whom they will fight when the time comes for the attack, but no one thinks of him as a man. The enemy is a unit of war, something outside ordinary life, a being in uniform whom it is glorious to kill. He is "the enemy"—something which will do great mischief to France if one does not take care, something which must be much more terrible and dangerous than they can imagine, since all the men of France lose the best years of their youth in learning to kill this eventual adversary.

If ever the peasants come clearly to realize that the only use of war is to kill people like themselves; if ever each soldier becomes capable of imagining what the shock of two armies is and by what complicated series of lies and intrigues people are brought to the point of killing each other, the work of peace congresses will be wonderfully simplified.—Contemporary Review.

Reading as a Cure.
The practice of reading aloud at regular intervals is of great benefit to any one affected with a chest complaint. In all cases of lung trouble it is important to indulge in those exercises by which the chest is in part filled or emptied of air, and reading aloud, singing and whistling are three of those exercises.

There are many who cannot sing, and we do not expect the fair sex to whistle, but reading aloud can be practiced by all. Care must be taken not to overdo it, of course, and the body should be in such a position as to allow the chest to have free play.

Reading aloud, if we pay attention to what we are doing, will not only be beneficial from the standpoint of health, but will also have the effect of making us better speakers by teaching

In Extenuation.
A little girl between 4 and 5 years of age came running in from sliding one day and exclaimed to her mother: "Oh mamma, did you see me go down? I went like thunder."

To her mother's astonished question as to whom she had heard say that the little one replied, "Well, mamma, you know you said one day 'as quick as lightning,' and it always thunders after it lightens, doesn't it?"—Boston Christian Register.

When the rainy day saved for finally comes, a man finds that it is a deluge, whereas he only saved for a shower.—Aitchison Globe.

Seven Years In Bed.
"Will wonders ever cease?" inquire the friends of Mrs. L. Pease, of Lawrence, Kan. They knew she had been unable to leave her bed in seven years on account of kidney and liver trouble, nervous prostration and general debility; but, "Three bottles of Electric Bitters enabled me to walk," she writes, "and in three months I felt like a new person." Women suffering from headache, backache, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, fainting and dizzy spells will find it a priceless blessing. Try it. Satisfaction is guaranteed by all druggists and dealers in medicines. Only 50c.

It is said that the Southern Pacific company has sprinkled its roadbed with oil for eighty-eight miles west of Tucson. The oil cakes and holds the dust down, removing a very disagreeable feature of summer travel over that part of the road. This information will be hailed with delight by people, for it is reasonable to suppose from the "oil talk" that there will be a hundred producing wells hereabout in a short time, and no doubt oil will soon be so cheap Phoenix can sprinkle the streets with it and do away with the noisy old water carts. Oil will hold the dust, and water only holds it till the next cart comes along. It is being rapidly demonstrated the water is only good to wash with, except as a temporary make-shift.—Phoenix Republican.

Played Out.

Politics are warmer than the climate at Santa Fe. It is amusing to an outsider to witness the tremendous energy expended in politics in the territorial capital.
